Michael qualified for the Bar in 1986 with a Law Degree from Balliol and has practiced in Nottingham since 1990. He has worked on a number of high profile cases.

Michael is a senior and widely respected criminal practitioner with over 30 years' experience of appearing in the Crown Court both prosecuting and defending in almost equal measure. Many of the cases in which Michael appears are cases of considerable gravity, at a level just below that of 'silk'. Michael has a reputation for very thorough preparation and robust and persuasive advocacy.

A significant number of his cases are sexual offences. These include cases of 'stranger rapes', historical sexual abuse within the family, and sexual offences against children. He is, as a result, very experienced in dealing with child witnesses and well versed in cross-examining expert witnesses about medical matters, DNA and other issues.

He also appears regularly in cases involving serious violence (including murder and manslaughter), armed robberies (including with a firearm), professional burglaries, class A and B drug-dealing, death by dangerous/careless driving and downloading child pornography from the internet.
